Pre-tasting

A good chef knows that the taste of a dish, while cooking, might change from time to time. Therefore, it is important to taste the dish before serving it to the guest

Imagine your organization is about to make a large investment, which is an important decision. The choice you make has to be good, just like the dish a chef serves to his guests. That is why we always advise to do a proof of concept before moving on to buying licenses or consultancy hours.

Dot on the horizon

Having innovative and attainable concepts for innovation does not constitute success on itself. The new concepts have to be implemented in the organization and launched onto the market.

Looking at innovation projects, it is often difficult to determine what exactly has to be planned and realized in advance. In contrast to, for example, the implementation of a standardized IT package, one doesn't know exactly what to change yet. After all, it is a renewed concept, not a standard concept that already has been implemented before. This case shows that it is important to start small and gain experience. A great method to do this is a "Proof of Concept".

Proof of Concept

A "Proof of Concept" helps defining the economic viability of the idea, identifying possible technical issues when realizing it and delivering the input for building a business case. In addition to this, it is also a great start of a project, because it proves the proposition that was promised.

Bizzomate likes to offer you a "Proof of Concept"! This is a great option to see what fits your organization. During the "Proof of Concept" we will show you our complete concept:

- ✓ Decision Modeling with Avola
- ✓ Process control and application building with Mendix
- ✓ Scrum methodology

Duration and purpose

The idea of a "Proof of Concept" entails that Bizzomate will be present at your organization, during 4 days. We try to work with the following timing:

The "Proof of Concept" is the ideal way to taste our products and concepts. When you are finished, you will exactly know what you can potentially gain from your purchase at Bizzomate and you will be advised on possible next steps.
